World Judo Tour

GRAND SLAM
Tokyo, 2012

Marius L. VIZER
IJF President

Whereas the London Olympics have come to a close, we are now entering a new Olympic cycle that will lead us to the Rio 2016 Games. Throughout the next four years, our World Judo Tour will travel around the world and we will regularly return to the birthplace of our sport, Japan.

The Judo Grand Slam in Tokyo is indeed, one of the highlights of our calendar. The first Grand Slam of this new period, it can redistribute the cards of the World Ranking List. Nevertheless, it will be a very good test for all the participating athletes in the perspective of the next Games.

Judo was born in Japan in 1882, and although it has now become universal, it is always a pleasure for the whole judo family to meet in Tokyo, just a few steps away from the Kodokan, which celebrates its 130th anniversary in 2012. It is the perfect occasion to recall the values that Jigoro Kano has brought to us and that we transmit every day to our judoka.

In this context, I want to wish good luck to all the competitors who will be in Tokyo for the Judo Grand Slam, Tokyo 2012, and remind them that judo is above all, a fantastic tool for the education and development of individuals, as well as of society.

Haruki Uemura
President
All Japan Judo
Federation
The Kodokan

It is a great honor to welcome competitors, officials, and the IJF members from all over the world to the Tokyo Grand Slam 2012.

This year marks 130th anniversary of Kodokan Judo, founded in 1882 by Kano Jigoro Shihan. During the London Olympic Games, delegations from 135 countries and regions came together and a total 387 athletes competed in Judo. After the 7 days competition, 56 medals were awarded to representatives from 23 different countries. This clearly shows that the Judo has been enjoyed and attracting people all over the world.

I am looking forward to welcoming all of you, medalists from the Olympics, and talented athletes who are waiting in the wings to be the next champions. Also, it is my hope that all athletes participating will always do their best, strive for IPPON, and respect each other throughout the competitions.
